ABOUT

Wild Horse Sanctuary

A Place Where Wild Horses Can Simply Be Wild

For nearly five decades, Wild Horse Sanctuary—America's oldest wild horse and burro sanctuary—has provided one of the nation's most unique and enduring homes for wild horses and burros. Nestled on more than 5,000 acres in the rolling foothills of Northern California, the Sanctuary offers something increasingly rare—a place where these animals can live naturally, in family bands, with the freedom to roam across an expansive landscape.

Unlike traditional rescue facilities, the Sanctuary is designed to preserve natural behaviors and social bonds. Horses and burros share the land with native wildlife, creating a living landscape where visitors experience these remarkable animals much as they would in the wild.

Each September, Wild Horse Sanctuary welcomes approximately 400–600 visitors during its annual Open House. The Sanctuary welcomes supporters, volunteers, families, and visitors to experience this extraordinary place firsthand during its annual Open House. Through educational programs, demonstrations, and guided experiences, guests gain a deeper understanding of the importance of protecting America's wild horses and the landscapes they call home.

Today, Wild Horse Sanctuary continues its mission through the generosity of volunteers, donors, community partners, and businesses whose support provides lifelong care for hundreds of wild horses and burros while preserving this extraordinary place for generations to come.
